BETTER THAN CALOMEL.

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive-colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "loggy" and "heavy." They clear clouded brain and perk up the spirits. 15c and 30c.

WEDNESDAY EVE'G, MAY 9, 1923.

PUBLIC INTEREST FIRST.

There is encouraging prospect that the property owners in Snydertown and the City Council will be able to adjust the matter of street lines in such a way that the contemplated improvement of Snyder street can go forward without very much more delay. If such an agreement can be reached it will evidence the fact that the property owners have been influenced to act in the interests of the public instead of insisting upon their private rights.

In laying out the lots in the section in question the original owners of the land apparently did not realize the extent to which the community would grow or the proportions the demands for highway facilities would assume. If it had at that time been foreseen that a struggling village would within half a century or more become part of a progressive municipality serving as the trading center of a large section of country, more care would doubtless have been exercised in the establishment of property lines. In this respect Snydertown has not been different from many other and larger places. The result has been that with the march of progress it has become necessary to make numerous adjustments of property lines in order to conform them to the requirements of municipal growth. That is all that is being asked of the Snydertown property owners and recent developments indicate they are viewing the situation from this standpoint. While it may cause some inconvenience and possibly some loss to join in an adjustment of property lines such as the improvement of the street will require, the disposition of the property owners now seems to be to remove whatever obstacles may be in the way, which will be creditable alike to their public spiritedness and their good judgment.

"DAYLIGHT SAVING HOURS" INSTEAD OF "DAYLIGHT SAVING TIME."

The restoration of Eastern Standard time in the city of Pittsburg by the order of Mayor Magee, so as to "avoid any appearance of conflict with the Derrick Act," is much more to be commended than his honor's earlier proclamation requesting the employment of daylight saving time which the act expressly provides shall not be done.

Moreover the substitution of "daylight saving hours," by beginning and ending the day's work an hour earlier, is the reasonable and sensible method of applying the principle, to which the supporters of the Derrick Act have at no time objected. Their opposition has been directed solely against an infliction upon the public of the confusion and inconvenience of two time standards.

The Derrick Act makes no attempt, as Mayor Magee concedes, "to regulate the daily and hourly activities in the lives of the people." Because it has the support of the country people does not, as the city opponents to the measure contended, imply that the former wish to violate any right of the latter.

The opponents of "daylight saving time" have merely insisted that the substitution of "daylight saving hours" is the better and more practicable method by which to obtain the advantages and benefits of an additional hour of daylight, after the day's work is done. They have accorded to every individual, family, business, office or community the right to exercise all freedom of choice as to the hours when the work day should begin and end, which can be done without employing a fictitious time standard with its attendant hardships upon some groups of citizens.

The re-establishment of Eastern Standard time in Pittsburg therefore indicates that the advocates of "daylight saving time" have at least seen the reasonableness of the contention in support of "daylight saving hours," as opposed to the delusion of moving the clock ahead to accomplish the same purpose.

If the Soviets of Russia do no better in trying to invent a new religion than they have in inventing a new government it will have lots of hell in it and very little heaven.

The Snydertown street situation being one of line upon line it would seem to be the part of wisdom to apply a few good precepts in its solution.

Perhaps one reason more crossing accidents are taking place is due to the fact that more motorists are taking chances or the same old number is taking more chances of beating the trains.

"Daylight saving" by any other name than clock-moving ought to keep the early risers of Pittsburg sweet.

The general adoption of "daylight saving hours" would save many hours of argument over daylight saving time.

Plainly Connellsville's fleet of automobiles is becoming too large for the streets.

In addition to being the financial center New York now enjoys the added distinction of being the center of the clock-moving delusion.

Contracting for eight dwellings in a lump is giving the home building boom a substantial start.

Just Folks

Edgar A. Guest.

LIFE'S REWARD.

I have run it over,
I have run it through,
I have trod the clover
Under skies of blue;
I have heard the thunder,
Seen the lighting flash.
Seen my hopes go under,
Heard my castles crash
But from every sorrow
And from every pain,
Always some tomorrow
Smiled on me again.

Bitter days and lonely
I have had to face,
Days when anguish only
Seemed to rule the place.
But the storms abated,
And I rose to see
Orchards blossom-freighted
Birds in every tree,
Sunbeams dancing round me,
Joy beside my door,
And the care which bound me
Pressed me no more.

I have run it over,
All that life has meant,
I have played the rover,
Dreaming as I went;
Laughed and loved and neighbored,
Wept and suffered pain,
With the throng I've labored,
With them shared the rain;
But for all the trouble,
And for every tear,
Life has paid me double
In fellowship and cheer.

HOPE.

There's hope in a place however dark,
There's hope in a prison cell,
'Twas hope that lightened up Noah's Ark
Till the raging waters fell
And there's never a breast so bleak and bare
But the spunk of hope is glistening there

There is hope whatever the place may be.
There is hope in the darkened room,
Hope on the storm-tossed, angry sea
And hope at a loved one's tomb.
And there's never a heart so sorely torn
But can cherish the hope of a brighter morn.

Hope leads can shine through a gray stone wall
And barriers strong and stout,
And hope can answer the fatalist call
And no power can shut it out.
Though a man be shackled and locked away,
Hope sings to him a better day.

For hope will follow the will to be,
And go with the will to do,
And there's none so low in this world but he
May fashion his life anew.
For hope shall shine through the darkened day
Till the last brave man shall have passed away.

NINE CONVICTS SLAIN IN CAMP, WITNESS AVERS

By Associated Press.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 9.—Nine convicts serving at the convict camp of State Senator T. J. Knabb in Baker county met their deaths during the last year, six of these dying since last September, the joint legislative committee investigating convict camp brutalities was told today by Mrs. Thelma Franklin, a social worker of Glen St. Mary in Baker county.

Mrs. Franklin declared she had conducted a personal investigation into the records which showed that a coroner's inquest had been held over each and that death, according to jury verdicts in each instance, was "due to natural causes."

Two members of the committee jumped to their feet and Senator Knabb swerved around in his chair, when Mrs. Franklin related that Mary Sheffield, a negro woman, and her daughter, said to have been about 20 years of age, were shot and killed last Wednesday by Warden Thompson at one of the Knabb camps. The Sheffield woman was to have been used as a witness before the committee. Thompson is now in a hospital, having been cut by the woman.

Mrs. Franklin went down a list she had before her and told of the various deaths calling each by name and related how they were buried. One man whose relatives she was unable to locate, died and was buried in a manhole. She said the body was later exhumed and buried in a family cemetery.

Another youth, she declared, was given a whipping by one of the wardens and died two or more hours later; sitting upright in his chair.

"Gentlemen, I can tell you more," declared Mrs. Franklin. "But we people of Baker county got so aroused over the reported brutalities at the Knabb camps that a committee was named to make an inspection. Let each of these men tell you what they saw. Don't depend all on my word. Their report will startle you."

She told how J. B. Thomas, a prison inspector, and Senator Knabb almost came to blows in front of her when Thomas took the youth away from Knabb.

She declared Thomas told Knabb he could not be "bought" and that it would be murder to keep the youth at the "pen." She declared that Thomas told her later that "someone had offered me $1,500 to keep my mouth shut."

WRITES LETTER OF APPROVAL

Edinburg, Pa., Lady Tells How Dreco Relieved Sciatic Rheumatism; Limbs Were Numb, Couldn't Put Weight On It.

Says She Crawled Up Stairs and Would Slide Down.

No one can doubt for a second the honest, straightforward letter published here, from a well known lady giving her approval of DRECO the great herb remedy. Here are her own words:

Edinburg, Pa., April 18, 1922

David H. Fulton & Bro.
Proprietors of Dreco,
Baltimore, Maryland.
Gentlemen:—

"I write to recommend Dreco because it has done more for me than all those who have treated me. They all told me it was sciatic rheumatism in my right foot and limb. I suffered awful pains. I could not sleep at night and my whole limb was numb and helpless. I had no feeling in it. I could not step on my foot, just had to drag it for almost a year, had to crawl up stairs and slide down. I could not bear any weight on it at all. I have taken four bottles of Dreco and now have less pain, the numbness is gradually leaving me and I can walk better. I also suffered from constipation, had a poor appetite and a general rundown condition of the system. I have a good appetite since taking Dreco and sleep well. The constipation is relieved and I am gaining strength. I have been greatly benefited by Dreco and will gladly recommend it to others."

Signed,
Mrs. Mary Harmon, Route 2.

Could anything be more convincing? Anyone who suffers as Mrs. Harmon did should begin taking Dreco at once.

FIRST BROADCASTING AT STATE TONIGHT

STATE COLLEGE, May 9.—The first official test of the radio broadcasting station at the Pennsylvania State College, WCAB, is to be made here tonight when a special musical program will be given, starting at 8 o'clock. Some troublesome defects in the station apparatus were located and adjusted a few days ago by the electrical engineering department, which has charge of the station operation, and it is now in condition for trial tests.

The program tonight from State College will be rendered by the men's glee club and the varsity male quartet. D. V. Bauder, of Galeton, a member of the junior class, winner of the vocalists section of the state contest for young artists held by the State Federated Music Clubs, will render a tenor solo. F. W. Rayl, of Beaver Falls, a freshman, violinist, will also be heard. Dean R. L. Sackett of the Penn State school of engineering will give a short talk.

A special "Music Week" program will be given from WCAB next Tuesday night under the supervision of R. W. Grant, college director of music. The results of these two programs will determine the service of the station and, if successful an attempt will be made to give regular programs with student musical talent and faculty educational talks three times a week. Inasmuch as this is the first official test at WCAB, radio fans are requested to send reports to the operator if the station is heard.

HISTORICAL PAGEANT AT CALIFORNIA NORMAL

On Friday afternoon June 1 on the campus of the State Normal School at California there will be presented an educational and historical pageant of interest to all residents of southwestern Pennsylvania.

The pageant will be a series of eight episodes and will portray some of the conspicuous phases of neighborhood history. The origin and development of the school will be emphasized in several of the episodes. An effort will be made to present the normal as a driving force in the valley's prosperity and culture. Many floats will pass in review and represent the leading industries and business activities of the district.

Every student and teacher at the Normal will have some active part in working up this mammoth project. Principal John A. Eutz and Miss Margaret Stroh, dean of women, taking the lead in organizing and directing the initial steps. Rehearsals have already begun and will continue until the date of presentation.

Faith in Connellsville Keynote of Wright-Metzler Anniversary Celebration

From a compartively small store to one of the largest retail establishments in Fayette county—all in the short space of 19 years—is the enviable achievement which stands behind Wright-Metzler Company's 19th anniversary sale, to begin tomorrow. The history of the store is so inseparably connected with the growth and development of the city that the occasion takes on an aspect of civic interest entirely independent of its fame as a merchandising event of the utmost importance.

The store's founder, F. W. Wright, at one time conducted a dry goods business in Scottdale. There came a day when he felt the urge to seek greater fields to conquer. After diligently investigating the merits of several cities in this section of the State, he decided to locate in Connellsville for he believed that this city faced a future of greatest promise. Accordingly, in May 1901, with S. W. Metzler as his partner, Wright-Metzler Company's Connellsville store was founded with faith in Connellsville as its cornerstone.

From the very inception of the enterprise, the firm stressed the "quality idea." It believed that people were more interested in the service, workmanship or the style of the merchandise offered them, than in any other factor. So from the very start, the store confined its efforts to exploiting only the best grades in any particular line of merchandise; taking due care to see that this merchandise was always presented to the public at its lowest possible price.

The business grew by leaps and bounds—eloquent testimonial of the fact that Connellsville folk appreciated a store with the high ideals which have always characterized Wright-Metzler service!

When the store first threw its doors open to the public it was not the institution that Connellsville knows today—although it was located in the same building. The dry goods, notion, shoe and women's ready-to-wear departments occupied the main floor. While the small part of the present second floor that the firm then occupied was devoted to men's clothing and carpets. Today the establishment occupies the entire first, second and sixth floors of the First National Bank building and the major portion of the Dunn-Paine Building in North Pittsburg street.

Its 27 departments cover every human need with the exception of furniture. Visitors to the city often remark the scope and beauty of its stocks—saying that they seldom find so fine a store even in cities of much greater than the local population. The holding of a style show in the High School Auditorium last spring evidenced the progressive spirit of the firm and its ability and determination to keep abreast of the latest developments in modern retailing.

Mr. Wright and other members of the firm are unanimous in expressing their appreciation of the good will and patronage that the community's folk have showered upon them. They feel, too, that this appreciation must be expressed in stronger terms than words. With this thought in mind their 19th anniversary celebration has been planned.

This celebration is to take the form of a store wide sale in which thought of profit is made subservient to a desire to provide the public with needed merchandise at unusually low prices, in the belief that this is the best way in which a store can express its gratitude to its friends.

The anniversary celebration is to begin tomorrow. It stresses quality as well as the low prices for which its bargains may be obtained. The firm extends everyone in the district a cordial invitation to attend.

At the Theatres

THE PARAMOUNT.

"TOO MUCH BUSINESS," adapted from Earl Derr Biggers' Saturday Evening Post story, is the feature attraction today and tomorrow at this theatre. The cast includes such well known players as Edward Horton, who makes his first appearance upon the screen after a long and successful run in dramatic stock. He has a big following in Brooklyn, Pittsburg, Philadelphia, Portland, Me., Portland, Ore., Scranton, Wilkes-Barre, Elmira and Los Angeles, where he is appearing in stock. Ethel Grey Terry plays opposite Mr. Horton. She was born in Oakland, California, and educated in Boston. Her stage career consists of an engagement with Belasco in "The Lily," and two seasons as lead in "The Smouldering Flame," and "Scarce Me." She is a member of a stock company in Los Angeles and has appeared upon the screen in "Arsene Lupin," "Greater Than Love," "The Penalty," "Habit," and "The Breaking Point." Tully Marshall was born in Nevada City, California, and became an actor, manager and producer of stage productions. He made a success and won a reputation upon the stage before entering pictures and since then he has appeared in such famous productions as "The Girl Who Stayed at Home," "The Life Line," "Everywoman," "Double Speed," and "Her Kingdom of Dreams."

Friday and Saturday Franklyn Farnum will be seen in "Wolves of the Border."

THE SOISSON.

"SAFETY LAST," showing today and tomorrow at this theatre, presents Harold Lloyd in his greatest screen achievment.

Thrills with frills and chills are promised, with the spectacled comedian performing the difficult task of climbing the side of a twelve story building and reaching the roof after overcoming the most hilarious and fearful hazards. And, although suffering part of the time from a dislocated shoulder, Harold declined to use a "double" at any stage of the production. Indeed, it will not require a close inspection to disclose this fact.

This story has been heard so many times about a picture star that it is now old stuff, but this time it is an actual fact. Even the closest observers of picture productions will not find a single double-exposure, or uncover one scene in the entire seven reels of "Safety Last" that would tend to question the reality of the thrill stuff.

"Safety Last," however, is not all thrills. The first part contains the most wholesome and amusing comedy moments and incidents that Harold Lloyd has ever put on the screen. In his role of a department store clerk, the spectacled comedian is absolutely at his best. He is the rollicking youth of "A Sailor Made Man"—just Harold Lloyd, "himself."

The production contains one of the most delightful love stories ever screened, with Mildred Davis, of course, being the young lady in the case. As the worshipping young man, Harold Lloyd puts all the famous screen lovers to shame and mingles sentiment with comedy in a most charming manner. "Safety Last" can be truly said to be the greatest comedy ever produced.

THE ORPHEUM.

"ROBIN HOOD"—Douglas Fairbank's super-photodrama, the leading picture today and tomorrow at this theatre, is the most expensive production the celebrated star has ever made.

According to Mr. Fairbanks himself, this latest of his truly epochal photoplays, is a combination of fact and fancy, a vital drama depicting the chivalrous and romantic spirit of the twelfth century, comprising an enchanting mixture of the fairy tale and a gorgeous display of the valorous deeds of eight hundred years ago, so that the people of today easily can grasp. It is in short, the presentation of an impression inspired by historical facts and with a beautiful historical background.

It was no small task to conceive or perfect the integral parts which make up this masterly cinema achievement. Primarily, it required five months to gather all available data on the Norman period before the first step could be taken toward actual work of producing the picture.

This exhaustive research work was undertaken by a corps of recognized authorities on the various subjects involved and was headed by Dr. Arthur Woods. Their quest for knowledge took them abroad where they delved into all the records they could find and where they visited all the museums containing relics of that age. Most of their time was spent in England.

Besides all this personal investigation, it was necessary for Dr. Woods and his assistants to read and study some 150 books dwelling on history, the art of war in the twelfth century, arms and armor, costumes archery, paintings and other subjects.

Friday and Saturday, Wallace Reid will be seen in "Thirty Days."

New Fabrics Are Gay and Alive With Color

All over the world dressmakers are busy cutting up silks and cottons of the gayest colors and the most fantastic designs. And close on their heels come the milliners, fashioning hats from corresponding materials and colorings. The prints which are in so great demand have had a more potent effect on the colors in millinery than they have on the fabrics used for hats, although one sees many matching sets consisting of a dress of printed calico or silk with a hat of the same fabric.

A model which lends itself to a development of this sort is of India calico printed in multicolors. The band at the bottom of the skirt, the plaited panels at the side, and the sleeve bandings are of a dull reddish-brown silk. This combination of cotton and silk might be very attractively worked out in a hat of poke bonnet shape or in one of the wide-brimmed hats, typical of midsummer.

Already silhouette, general character and the popular materials and trimmings of millinery for the coming summer have been decided. Each of the famous modistes has, of course, her own point of view concerning the mode for the new season, although there would seem to be a general agreement that hats both large and small should feature rich colorings and for trimmings, flowers, lace or ribbons. None of these trimmings is distinctly new, but all are important.

Start A Bank Account With What A Keystone Store Will Save You

ARE you buying your groceries thriftily? Do you know that you spend more for groceries than for any other class of necessities for your family? And you can save more on groceries than on anything else!

Your grocery bill runs from $10 to $20 a week—or from $500 to $1,000 a year.

If you buy from an old-fashioned independent grocer, you are paying this full amount and perhaps more.

If you buy from a Keystone chain store, you save from 15% to 35%—or about an average of 25%—under the independent grocer's prices.

And it is better to buy at Keystone because the Keystone Stores push no "private label" goods under their own name—all of the Keystone groceries are the best of their kind, made by manufacturers who spend millions of dollars in establishing a reputation for their excellence.

You save, therefore, from $125 to $250 a year by buying everything at a Keystone Store—enough to start a nice bank account—enough to pay for ten times as many Xmas presents as you need when the end of the year comes around—almost enough to purchase a home, a piano or anything else you want.

Isn't it worth while to buy all your grocery needs at a Keystone Store and bank the difference?

The Purpose of Every Keystone Store
Keystone Grocery Stores are clean, cheerful, pleasant places in which to buy, supplying the finest nationally known standard groceries and food-stuffs at prices from 15% to 35% less than the old-fashioned independent grocer. This is done by buying in carload lots direct from the sources of supply, thus eliminating all middle profits. Buy everything at Keystone Stores and bank the difference.

GOOD BASE RUNNING REQUIRES PRACTICE

Baseball Player Must Learn to Start Fast and Master Hook or Fall-Away Slide.

(By CARL LUNDGREN, Baseball Coach, University of Illinois)

To become a good, intelligent base runner, a player must put in a great deal of practice, experimenting, thought, and above all, be able to use good judgment in running.

He should learn to start fast and master the hook or fall away slide The fast start means the saving of a stride or possibly two in the race with the ball and the hook slide makes it difficult for the opponents to touch you with the ball, frequently saving you from being tricked out at the end of your journey This slide should be mastered at the very beginning and the ability to use it on either side of the base, thereby enabling you to watch your opponent who is receiving the thrown ball, and slide as far away from him as possible If the throw is received in front of the base, naturally you should slide to the back; if it is received back of the base, your slide should be in front, and if the throw is high slide either way or straight.

Next in importance, certainly, is your ability to get a good lead from which to run from any base. Many slow runners are excellent base runners because of their ability or knack of getting this lead. There are two leads off any base One is often called the one-way lead where the runner leads off so far that he must return to his base at the slightest false move of the pitcher; in other words, he does not lean toward the base in advance for fear of being caught off, nor can he advance on the pitch as he should because it will take him so far from his base that a throw from the catcher will catch him The other and proper lead may be called a two-way lead by which the base runner may return or advance with his start or lead obtained from the pitcher's delivery There are comparatively few pitchers that do not give away the fact that they are going to pitch to the plate some considerable time before they do pitch there and it is this fact that clever base runners can and do take advantage of The base runner always should be trying for this lead and if he can time his lead or start toward the next base just in advance or even at the same time that the pitcher starts to pitch he will have an excellent start and should run provided it is the proper time in the game to run Consequently it is readily to be seen that a team should study the opposing pitcher from the bench to discover the first move that he makes when he pitches to the plate that will give them this start if they become base runners later Of course the pitcher is trying to disguise this first move by other false moves or half balk moves

At second base the base runner should determine how long a lead he can take and still return safely provided the pitcher turns to catch him He may advance beyond this lead by quick starts and returns to this point but should never return beyond that point unless the pitcher turns to catch him Infielders should not be able to drive you back beyond that point.

At third base the lead should be such that the runner can advance until the ball passes the hitter and then can return in safety In case the ball is hit, the runner is then on his way to score At all bases the runner should be advancing toward the next base on all pitches until the ball passes the batter when he should return fast Fast should be emphasized If the ball is hit, the runner has a running lead toward the next base

Probably the next important thing in base running is good judgment There are times in a game that bases should be run and times when they certainly should not be run It is not good base ball to run bases when your team is behind unless your run will tie the score Your run will make little difference as to winning the game unless more batters score, in which case your run would have been batted in. You are only giving your opponents added opportunities to make a put-out, which you are trying to avoid doing above all things. As a rule it is not wise to run bases when the batter is in the hole, that is the pitcher has the advantage as to balls and strikes because the pitcher can waste the ball on a pitch-out to catch you without harming himself to any extent.

You should also consider the pitcher's ability to hold you close to the base; also the catcher's ability to throw you out in case you do run. It may be that some kind of team play at bat, such as hit and run, may be more successful than clean stealing. The number of men out in an inning should be a determining factor in running bases. Do not take chances when there is no one out. Take all even chances or slightly the worst of it in your judgment when one man is out and you are even or ahead as to the score

Try to avoid being involved in a double play, especially with one out.

Decide quickly on fly balls to the outfield whether or not you can advance if the ball is caught. If you can, in your opinion, go back, touch your base and be ready to start fast If it is too short a fly ball take all the lead that you can in safety toward the next base and be ready to advance if it is dropped and to return fast if it is caught. The runner on third base should touch and remain on the base on all line hits or fly balls until they are caught, dropped or fall safe with one or no one out, except short hits that he could not score on if caught In the latter case take all the lead that you can in safety and be ready to score if dropped or return if caught.

If caught between bases avoid being touched out until all base runners have advanced as far as they can.

With runners on second and third base the runner on third should hold his base if the ball is hit to an infielder playing close with no one out. Same condition and one out, try to score

Do not depend on your coachers when you can follow the play yourself. You must listen to them, however, when the play is behind you. The coacher is blamed for too many bad plays when the base runner has the play in front of him and is entirely to blame himself.

Cobb Ranks as Oldest Player in American

Cobb is the oldest player in the American league in point of service

Cobb joined the Tigers in 1905 and is still going good He has seen 18 years of service. Despite the strenuous game he plays, he has slowed down but little

If Cobb continues to be a success as manager he can go on indefinitely in baseball, long after he is through as a player.

Cobb alone remains of the players who were in the American league at the time of his debut. He has seen them all pass out.

Eddie Collins and Walter Johnson are close behind Cobb in point of service While Johnson is slowing up a bit, Eddie Collins seemed as good as ever last season, with a number of years ahead of him in the majors.

where you want it— when you want it!

PETROLEUM, after its journey from the distant oil wells and its conversion through intricate processes into gasoline, serves but small purpose until placed where you want it.

We, as a company serving the public in the manufacture, sale and distribution of a commodity vital to modern life, must anticipate not only your needs, but your whereabouts.

The familiar Atlantic pump stands on the busiest street in the city and at the loneliest cross-roads outpost with a ready supply of Atlantic Gasoline to serve your needs.

The convenience you enjoy through the service of the Atlantic pump nearest at hand, wherever you may be, is multiplied thousands of times by the pumps which dot the landscape. Obviously the pumps are expected to sell gasoline. The point we wish to make is the value of the service in having it always where you want it, when you want it. That is to be considered when the price of gasoline is discussed.

So that you may have a picture of the background of such a service, it may be interesting to know that of the 9,700 employees of The Atlantic Refining Company, more than 2,500 of them are engaged in the service of distribution, and more than $24,882,400 of capital is employed in that branch of the work. There are 330 Atlantic wholesale distributing points, from which are operated 750 Atlantic motor tank trucks supplying the dealers and filling stations in their respective localities.

Day and night, winter and summer, through rain, mud or blizzard, these trucks operate to keep the Atlantic customers supplied.

There are more than 9,800 points at which you can buy Atlantic Gasoline and always be sure of getting the same uniform quality.

At the most remote or lonely point in the country the cost will be no greater than at the busiest station in the heart of the city.

Such a service is made possible by the size and completeness of the organization behind it, by years of thoughtful planning, by the intelligent energies of men devoting their lives to the industry, by the incentive which private enterprise inspires.

Those who would advocate a Government controlled petroleum industry do not stop to realize that initiative would be dampened, individual effort hampered, efficiency reduced. Such control would weaken or destroy the very factors which have made gasoline one of the cheapest commodities you can buy, and gasoline service one of the most efficient services of modern merchandising.

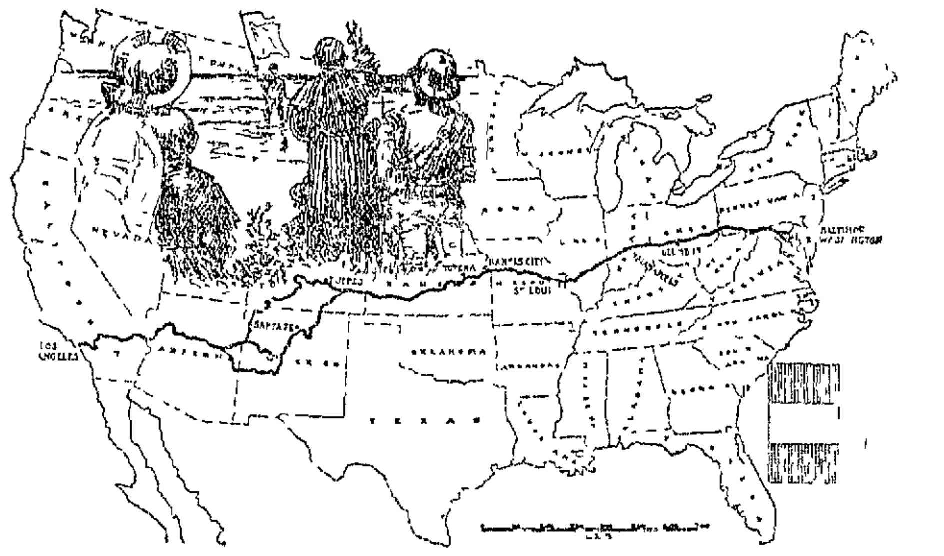
WHAT WILL BE THE LOT OF THE AMERICAN GIRL WHO MARRIES A TITLE?

LADY ASHBURTON, FORMERLY MISS FRANCES DONNELLY OF NEW YORK, ONE OF LONDON'S FAVORITE HOSTESSES (LEFT) AND PRINCESS DIMITRI GALITZINE WHO HAS RETURNED TO AMERICA AFTER LOSING HER FORTUNE IN RUSSIA

NEW YORK—Varying lots befall American girls who have married titled foreigners. Not all of them have enjoyed pure happiness in the acquisition of nobility, while many have stepped into positions of enviable social prominence. Of the latter class Lady Ashburton, wife of Major Lord Ashburton, fifth baron and formerly Miss Frances Donnelly of New York, is an example. Lady Ashburton is one of London's most beautiful American born women of title, as well as one of her favorite hostesses.

On the other hand is Princess Dimitri Galitzine, who was Miss Frances Stevens of New York before her marriage to the Russian naval officer. During the new rule in Russia the Galitzine fortune and all that the princess had, disappeared and she has returned to New York just in time to save her mother from sacrificing all that remains to her here, in an effort to help her daughter, while Prince Galitzine studies in Paris to be a carpenter.

Old Trails Lead Auto Tourist From Capital to Coast



THE rubber tired tenderfoot can now traverse the vasty stretches of these United States without a sextant or a compass and be sure of getting home if the gas holds out.

The trails have been blazed and the man who is fortunate enough to possess anything from a cycle car to a limousine can hit the trail to the place his fancy ends and go by the best and shortest possible route.

Most historic of all the new system of national highways is the National Old Trails Road, 3030 miles from Washington, D. C. to Los Angeles. It is the all weather route from the nation's capital to the capital of the bathing beauty belt.

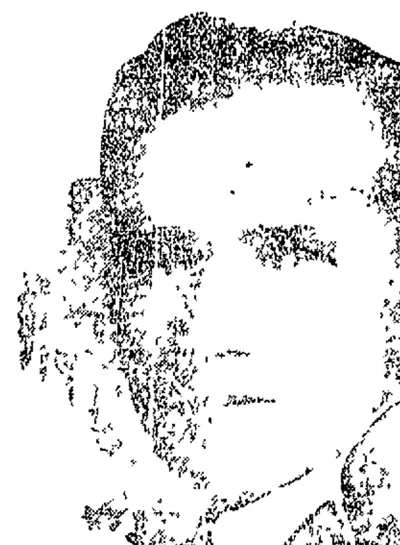
The trail marker fittingly enough is a red, white, and blue rectangle, displayed at convenient intervals and at every little section. It leads the tourist from Washington or Baltimore along Braddock's Road and the National Pike, the first highway which the nation constructed through country reminiscent of young Col. Washington and the Indian Wars, to St. Louis by way of Wheeling, Columbus and Indianapolis. From St. Louis to Kansas City the trail follows the historic Boone's Lick Road, then runs on the pioneer's route of blood and sand, the Santa Fe Trail. Westward of Santa Fe is the Grand Canyon Route to the orange groves — the path of the Spanish conquistadores and the indomitable padres.

East and West the National Old Trails Road traverses thirteen states and ninety counties. It is a route rich in historic interest from terminus to terminus and penetrates what many consider the world's grandest scenic region.

The road is hard surfaced from Washington to Terre Haute, and in sections beyond Terre Haute. Most of the highway through the Southwest has a dragged dirt surface, good in dry weather—and this is dry weather country.

Excellent hotel accommodations are to be had at the natural night stops for the entire distance. By means of the official auto trails maps, which are the keys to the national system of marked highways and to the conditions to be encountered along these highways, a coast to coast trip over the National Old Trails Road is not only practicable for the average tourist but can be made with ease and assurance, combining maximum pleasure with minimum difficulty.

Noted Health Experts Join In A National Crusade To Make Life Safe F[...] [...]thers and Children



COURTENAY DINWIDDIE

DR. THOMAS D. WOOD

As officers of the American Child Health Association, Courtenay Dinwiddie and Dr. Thomas D. Wood are associated with Herbert Hoover, the president, in a great undertaking, the slogan of which is "To Save the Mother and Child." Mr. Dinwiddie is the general executive of the Association and Dr. Wood one of the three vice-presidents.

Both these officials are splendidly equipped for the tasks they have undertaken. Mr. Dinwiddie was connected from 1904 to 1907 with Bellevue and its allied hospitals of New York, whence he went to Duluth, where for three years he was active in developing social service and health bodies. He was superintendent of Public Welfare there and was responsible for its celebrated housing code.

From Duluth Mr. Dinwiddie went to Cincinnati. At first he was superintendent of the Anti-Tuberculosis League, but later fathered the Public Health Federation. He was also associated with a health experiment in the Mohawk-Brighton district, which established new standards and methods for the protection of the health of babies and younger children especially. As executive secretary of the National Child Health Council, a group of six big organizations formed in 1920, he was prominently identified with the first successful step in the coordination of National health activities, a movement which led directly to the recent amalgamation which brought about the American Child Health Association.

Dr. Wood long has been recognized as an authority on child health and has devoted much of his time to this work. He is college physician and professor of physical education at Teachers' College, Columbia University. As chairman of the joint committee of the American Medical Association and the National Education Association he has been especially active in developing standards for the health of school children.

The American Child Health Association has taken the Children's Bill of Rights, drawn up by Mr. Hoover, as a declaration of its purposes.

The American Child Health Association's national headquarters is at 532 Seventeenth Street, Washington, D. C. Applications for membership may be made to the treasurer, Corcoran Thom, at that address.

PREDICT WEATHER YEAR IN ADVANCE

Bureau Making Strides In Long-Distance Forecasting.

IMPORTANT TO KNOW AHEAD

The pastor of the Fifth Baptist church will be able to announce on Christmas eve what kind of weather the Sunday school will have for its picnic on the following Fourth of July, if the science of weather forecasting continues to advance with the leaps and bounds of the last few years.

The meteorologists of the government have so far perfected their science that they can forecast the weather for longer and longer periods, and it is regarded as well within the realm of probability that they ultimately can predict with a fair amount of certainty what the weather will be on a given day two, three or even five years in advance.

Too casual consideration might lead one to think of the weather as relatively unimportant in human affairs. A rainy day may be an annoyance or it may spell merely something to cry the paper, a cold snap in the winter nothing to add to the riches of the coal barons.

Weather Not to Be Sniffed At

The fact is that weather has as profound an effect on human affairs as any other phenomenon. [...] determining climate. It [...] the development of races and [...] establishes the products of the soil. [...] "[...] a day," is to [...] the most important subject [...] in the world. Weather forecasting is comparatively a new science. Prof. Cleveland Abbe, an American, was the first important meteorologist. [...] the world he was [...] principle [...] the elements to be [...]

When money comes into any equation it is serious attention [...] paid to Professor Abbe in [...] a great British marine insurance establishment [...] his work [...] to the satisfaction of officials of that institution that he could forecast storms. His forecasts were used to assist Lloyd's in fixing rates of the insurance on ships setting out soon. If Professor Abbe forecast foul weather, a lower rate would be quoted, [...] forecasts of a [...] and some [...] company thousands. Later the earned profits helped found the United States weather bureau. As early as 1869 he inaugurated a series of weather reports for the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce.

To many a [...] a national joke. [...] would [...] many weather [...] this day "Probably rain" or probably [...] From this he gained the [...] "Old Probable" which stuck to him for years.

Importance of Knowing Ahead

Professor Abbe was one of the first scientists to understand the importance of weather forecasting, but in recent years new importance has been added to the science by the development of long time predictions. To forecast the weather twelve or twenty four hours in advance is important, to forecast such meteorological phenomena six months or a year in advance becomes of transcendental importance.

It will be seen that if the cotton planters of the United States can know now what the weather conditions will be for the next growing season they can be guided in their preparations for planting, tilling and harvesting. If the cotton exchange and the markets of the world can know now what the conditions of weather will be they can gauge the crop almost to a bale and, by relating the new harvest to existing stocks and rate of consumption, they can tell what the price should be now and will be six months or a year ahead. The same is true of wheat, corn and other crops, even of cattle and meat live stock generally.

The commercial importance of this is recognizable instantly. Guess long range forecasts would in all probability accomplish what parliaments have been trying for years to do—that is, all the speculative element out of trading in foodstuffs.

If everyone knows what the weather conditions will be throughout the growing season and thereby can accurately judge the volume of the harvest, the gambling element is eliminated. The [...] forecast months in advance would be stabilized and the fluctuations, the ups and downs of price which bankrupt dealers and often in the end squeeze high prices out of the ultimate consumer, would be slight if they did not disappear altogether.

Forecasts Rice Crop

Right now an expert meteorologist has made a forecast which indicates that the rice crop of Japan will be [...] this year and the Japanese dealers and the government can take measures to find other sources from which they may import. If they had to wait until next fall to know that the crop would be short something of a panic doubtless would be occasioned.

These forecasts are also important in the winter season. Coal mine operators would know how much [...] should be built up during the summer months if they knew in advance how cold the winter would be. [...] and seal hunters would be [...] Navigators would know [...] when navigation would [...] waters [...] there would be a thousand other important uses of such information.

The United States weather bureau is moving cautiously in this matter and has discovered secrets which have not yet been announced because the government distrusts premature conclusions. The scientific work, however, is progressing and it is expected that it will not be long before some international arrangement is reached whereby the nations of the world will co-operate in making observations and reports which will absolutely harness the weather so far as information is concerned.

Already the science has advanced far enough to enable the meteorologists to know where changes in weather originate. The Behring sea and the area in the bleak and frigid region of Lake Baikal in Siberia are the breeding grounds of storms which swing out across the world the bodies of atmosphere of high or low pressure.

Ancient mythologies of Greece, of Rome of the Vikings peopled gods of the thunder, the wind and the storm. Tomorrow there will be new gods sitting behind the desks on which rest charts of the world and, while these gods cannot hold the storms they at least will be able to point their direction and foretell their intensity.

It is interesting historical speculation to wonder if Joseph was more of a meteorologist than a prophet and an interpreter of dreams. It will be remembered how he interrupted the Pharaoh's dream of the seven fat kine and the seven lean kine to prefigure seven years of plenty and seven of famine. The importance of what the new long distance weather forecasting will mean to humanity cannot be better exemplified than by reference to that tale for did not Joseph during the seven years of plenty amass stores of corn and oil and did not those provident stores save the people of the land of Egypt from starvation when the lean years came?

DEFIES FLAMES FOR DOLLS

Fourteen Year Old Girl Makes Desperate Attempt to Save Playthings

Any girl will understand and sympathize with the impulse which sent Mary O'Shaughnessy, fourteen, into the smoke and flames consuming her father's residence, McHenry street and White Plains road, Tuckahoe, N. Y., in an effort to rescue her children from the playroom.

That Mary did not share in the fiery fate of her beloved dolls is due to her father, James O'Shaughnessy, executive secretary of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, who overtook her at the threshold of the burning room and dragged her back. But Mary never gave a thought to this as she and her two sisters, Pride, nine, and Jane, six, wept bitterly over the mutilated remains of their little playmates when they had collected them for a funeral after the fire.

The sisters joined their voices in angry screams at heartless firemen who threw more dolls and doll furnishings from the ruined upper story of the house.

PLANE LANDING MADE SAFE

British Inventor Constructs Shock Absorbing Chassis for Air Machines

An airplane undercarriage that is practically uncrushable is the remarkable product of a British inventor. The new landing chassis looks to the uninitiated like any ordinary two wheeled undercarriage, but it is fitted with an ingenious system of pneumatic cylinders which prevent accidents even when the machine is being landed by an inexperienced pilot.

In a recent test of the new undercarriage Herbert [...], holder of the nonstop flight record to Turin, demonstrated that it would withstand shocks which would smash the ordinary chassis. He flew the machine at full speed into the ground from a height of 20 feet at an angle that would have turned an ordinary airplane over on its nose. The undercarriage absorbed the shock without even bouncing.

FINDS TROPICAL ARCTIC VALLEY

Region of Great Wealth Warmed by Hot Springs.

ONLY WHITE MAN TO VISIT IT

Victoria, B. C.—Beyond the northern wilderness of British Columbia on the border of the Yukon lies a tropical valley where dandelions grow three feet high and huge ferns wave in the warm breezes. Discovery of this extraordinary region is reported by Frank Perry, prospector and explorer, who has just arrived back in civilization after months of wandering around the headwaters of the Findlay river.

Innumerable hot springs warm the mysterious valley, Perry says and give to the soil chemical properties that result in luxuriant tropical growth. It lies 600 miles from the headwaters of the Findlay beyond a stretch of unknown mountains and forests and so warm is its temperature compared to that of the surrounding country that in winter the valley is covered with a blanket of mist. All over the valley hot and cold streams bubble out of the ground over which honeysuckle vines creep along for 40 or 50 feet, dandelions grow as thick as a man's arm, and huge ferns make walking difficult.

Animals Change Habits

Apparently this valley escaped glaciation altogether or for the long extends downward for hundreds of feet. Perry declares. The depth of the loam is seen where rivers have cut their way downward exposing the soil.

Living for many generations in this valley wild animals have changed their habits and have grown stunted by the unnatural warmth, Perry says. Moose are shorter than the monsters that wander about northern British Columbia and are more like domestic steers. Their skins [...] flash in the sun. Bears too are smaller than the bears outside the valley and their fur is soft like the hide of a fox.

Perry declares that he has found rich mineral deposits in this land which no white man but he has seen. He discovered iron ore exposed for hundreds of feet, and there are showings of aluminum, tin and silver at different places. Perry himself however is interested in a copper property which he discovered in the mountains near the mysterious valley. He is making arrangements now to fly into this claim taking with him a representative of a large mining company.

Travels 30,000 Miles

In the last 11 years Perry has traveled 30,000 miles through the wilderness he says. He has letters from officials of Hudson Bay company forts far down the Mackenzie river and at other northern points which he has visited in the course of his wanderings.

It would require $ 0,000,000 to build a railroad into the mysterious valley on the border of the Yukon, Perry says, but the expenditure would be justified by the enormous resources of the area he asserts.

Perry is so well known as an explorer and prospector that his story of discoveries in the little-known North has been received with wide interest. Wandering Indians have brought in tales of a tropical valley in the north of this province before, but little attention has been paid to them.

EYE AFFECTS WHOLE BODY

Why Routine Examination of School Children Is Imperative Is Explained by Authority

Dr. de Schweinitz in Hygeia first points out that only about 4 per cent of eyes are entirely normal according to optical standards. At birth nearly all eyes are farsighted. Nearsightedness most commonly makes its appearance from the sixth to the tenth year of life, that is to say, especially during school years. Such errors when marked give rise to eye strain [...] While it is true that few eyes are absolutely normal, many approach it so closely that for all practical purposes they may be considered normal. [...] and order the glasses are not required, at least in young [...]. But it must be realized further that good vision and painless [...] do not necessarily exclude eyestrain, and eyestrain may cause headache, pains in various parts of the body, twitching of the face, night terrors, nervousness, indigestion and many other symptoms. The need for the routine examination of the eyes of school children is therefore clear, and the possible effects of failure to recognize the fact of eye trouble are pointed out. "These effects are not limited to the eye itself. The eye is not confined as it were to a little area of its own subject to diseases and defects unconnected with the rest of the body. Quite the contrary. It is most intimate in its relations to the rest of the body." The problems which surround it, whether they relate to optical faults or to disease, are medical problems and must be solved with this fact always in view."

LIVING TISSUES ARE PUT UNDER THE MICROSCOPE

Scientist Perfects Apparatus Making It Possible to Study Human Cells.

An apparatus for the improved study of cellular tissue which it is expected may lead to important discoveries in the treatment of baffling ills has been announced at Northwestern University, Chicago, by Professor C. J. Tharaldsen of the department of zoology.

The instrument, it is said, will dissect living human tissue and bring the means of keeping its functions.

Professor Tharaldsen describes his microdissection apparatus as follows:

A small or large amount of tissue—the size does not matter—is cut from the human body. In this tissue are the living cells.

Then the tissue is fastened on the stage of the microscope of my apparatus. It is on the under side of the microscope lens and has been soaked in a nutrient solution to give it life. The solution is suspended in a drop from the under side of the lens.

Beneath the tissue there are tiny needles pointed upward and small hollow glass pipes.

Living cells or parts of them are isolated from the rest of the structure by a gradual breaking down process through use of the needles. Such a process and its effects have never before been observed.

"The hollow tubes are used to apply chemicals to the living cells and the remainder of the tissue.

Chemicals can be injected directly into the protoplasm of these cells and the effect can be studied through the microscope.

Studies in the past have largely been confined to the observation of dead and fixed tissues but in the last fifteen years there have been repeated attempts to dissect the living human protoplasm and to develop study under conditions. "Complete dissection is [...] little [...] now rendered wholly possible and practical.

Cokers Will Have Entries In Every Event in County Meet at Dawson Saturday

Kenneth Cunningham Will Enter High Hurdles for Local School.

RUNNERS NEED SPEED

The Connellsville High School, with only three more days before the field meet of the Fayette County Interscholastic Athletic Association, to be held at the Dawson Fair Grounds on Saturday, May 12, is still inclined to be optimistic. The boys are rounding into fairly good shape although some of the runners are inclined to loaf too much.

The weakest division in the Coker make-up is the track team. The speed boys will have to stretch their legs to score points in the meet as some fast entries from other schools have been listed. The Uniontown High School feels that branch is its strongest and the Redstone Township runners are not slow either.

Connellsville had not been considering entering the hurdles as that is a hard event, but feeling that something might result in adding an extra point through that event Coach Wine issued a call for volunteers to enter it. Kenneth Cunningham will take a fling at the job and "Buckey" Lowney and Tom Smith are also considering their chances. There are no experts in that line in any of the county schools and local athletes would be just as much in the running as any other.

George Enos is the best bet on the discus throw and Johnny Ross looks good to take honors in the broad jump. He will have to extend himself, however. Jean George can jump as well, is not better, than the mark made by Uniontown in its recent inter-class meet.

The circus will be here Saturday but in spite of that fact many High School students will accompany the team to Dawson to cheer it on in its efforts. The boys have secured their running shoes and will now be in better shape to improve their running time.

Capstan Baseball Team Desirous of Booking Good Clubs

The Capstan baseball team will play the Fayette Baking Company team at Capstan field tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

The Capstan team is now open to book games with first class organizations and would like to hear from Trotter, Dunbar, Mount Pleasant and West Newton. Call Bell 1380 and ask for Mr. Sheering.

Tennis Association Will Banquet Tuesday

The Connellsville Tennis Association will hold its fourth annual banquet on Tuesday, May 15, at the Ca Canney Restaurant in the Royal Hotel. A number of acceptances have already been received from members and it is anticipated that between 20 and 25 will attend.

The committee in charge states it is desirous of hearing from those who have not replied to the invitation as to whether they will attend or not. The committee is composed of Isadore Horowitz, H. J. Carr and James M. Driscoll.

Of Interest to Fans.

The Pittsburg Nationals won their first game of the eastern tour yesterday by defeating Brooklyn, 8-6. Grimm got another hit, it being a home run in the second frame, thereby extending his string of consecutive hitting to 21 games.

The weather today was more suitable for football than for a track meet. Short running trousers were not conducive to comfort and warmth.

Twilight games planned by the Connellsville Independents for mid-week will please the men who do not get through work in the afternoon in time to see the Cokers performing on Saturday.

Vincent Richards

Vincent Richards, the youthful American tennis star, played an exhibition game on the courts of the Princess hotel Bermuda, with Hon. F. M. B. Fisher of New Zealand. Richards won the first two and only two sets played by a score of 6-0 and 12-10.

MORE GOLF COURSES IS GENERAL DEMAND

Over Million Tickets Were Issued in 1922 to Enthusiasts of Game in Chicago.

The pressing need of more golf courses to supply the demands of the increasing army of golfers was shown by the compilation of the numbers of golfers who played over Chicago's links during 1922. While more than 1,000,000 tickets were issued, starters said three or four times as many would have been in demand if there had been room for play.

The courses were crowded from dawn to dusk from earliest spring to latest fall, and players were sent out in fours, so close to each other that two or three foursomes were on each hole. The largest number were accommodated at the 18-hole links in Jackson park, where 124,584 players teed off, or 5,000 a day from March to December. This required the starting of four players every five minutes from 6 a. m. until 5 p. m. on the average.

The dearth of links in proportion to players has started the building of nearly a dozen pro rata courses in Chicago, where the golfer may pay as he plays, without the formality of joining a club. These courses cost the golfer somewhat more in carfare and fees; but do not require much more time, for he is able to play on arrival, and cover the course in half the time he takes on congested links.

Plans are already under way in Chicago to build a score more pro rata links, and the forest preserve commission, with room for 50 additional links, is planning a half-dozen for the near future.

The largest play on any private links in the world was that at the Olympia Fields club, Chicago, which, with three 18-hole courses, took care of 60,000 golfers in 1922. It was estimated that the other 65 private golf clubs in Chicago provided for some 100,000 golfers last year, these courses lying idle most of the day except week-ends and holidays.

Pop Geers, the famous driver, is planning to tour the big fairs with a small stable of trotters and pacers and Sanrolo, 1:59¼.

OVERTIME ADDING HEAVILY TO COST OF MOVING TRAINS

Amounts to as Much, Sometimes More, Than Straight Time Wages.

COKE REGION EXAMPLES

Trainmen on the Monongahela Railway Said to be Biggest Earners; New York Central Is Planning a Bonus System for Reducing Time.

Overtime in wages to men comprising the train crews engaged in handling freight on the railroads is assuming such proportions that it is adding heavily to the cost of moving trains. This is a condition general throughout the country but in districts like the Connellsville region where hundreds of carloads of bulky freight originate every day the problem is becoming a serious one to the railroads in their efforts to hold down the costs of transportation.

Among the railroads serving the coke region the Monongahela is said to have a heavier overtime charge in proportion to traffic moved than any other although the earnings for overtime of trainmen on other roads very frequently exceed the wages for the full time served before overtime begins.

Under the national agreements with the trainmen's unions time and half time is paid to trainmen whose wages are computed on an hourly rather than a mileage basis for all time over eight hours. To railroad managers this plan appears to have operated as a premium on loafing on a run for the longer a train is in reaching its destination the larger the earnings of the crew. Further it is believed to be preventing that degree of efficiency in service which preeminently transportation requires. At any rate railroad managers are giving serious thought to some means of solving the problem.

The New York Central is understood to have given such study to the problem that it contemplates adopting the plan of paying a bonus to freight crews which reach their terminal in less than the scheduled time. The reasoning upon which this plan is based is that if a crew can earn as much money by completing its run in seven hours as in nine the average trainman will exert himself to secure advantage of the two hours' time thus gained, which he can spend at home with his family instead of on the road. Railroad men will watch the effect of this policy of the New York Central which, if successful will no doubt be generally applied.

Trainmen who are given to discussing the overtime situation [illegible] view that railroads are themselves largely to blame for the present situation. Freight trains are loaded to the last ton of the engine-rating and creep over a division with numerous stops, break-in-twos, waits for helpers on grades etc. Railroad statisticians will furnish anyone with pages of facts proving that a heavily laden train—even though it moves slowly—is in reality more economical to operate than the light train which can cover the distance in half the time perhaps.

Statistically speaking this may be true yet there is another factor involved, namely that of the effect on the train crews who are forced to labor to get their heavy trains over the road. A light train load will make a happier personnel and the effect on employes is a matter well worth serious consideration when determining whether heavy or light trains shall be operated. Meanwhile the New York Central's idea will at least encourage trainmen on that road to make every effort toward speedy handling of trains in their charge.

GREAT DAY AMONG SEMINOLES

Florida Indians Made Holiday of Occasion When Whole Tribe Turned Out to Shoot Fish

In the old days before statehood fishing was a great holiday with the Seminoles in Florida. A chief fisherman was selected. He appointed the various committees looking towards the fishing, some to gather the devil's shoestring, some to dig the shoots and some to beat the roots after it was tied in bundles.

The "devil's shoestring" grew in abundance in the sand hills of Seminole county. The Seminoles dug down deep into the sand until they could get a firm hold on the root and then pulled until it came forth. These roots were then tied into bundles of 12 or more according to the size of the water stream. A board or log was then erected in the pool and the shoestring beaten with little mallets. It gave off a milky kind of coloring into the water and when this had thoroughly permeated the stream, the fish became intoxicated and would jump out of the water or skim along on their sides.

The shooters would then begin their work with the bow and arrow and as the larger fish came to the surface they would shoot them with arrows and the younger Indians would pick them out of the stream.

End of Cromagnon Age.

About 15,000 years ago the Cromagnon age in Europe came to an abrupt end. There developed a sudden mild heat to the climate, accompanied by cool rains. Heavy forests sprang up on what had been the open grass lands of wild reindeer, wild horses and wild bison. Glaciers pulled back up their Alpine slopes, the ice fields that were over what is now Norway and Sweden melted away. The Pleistocene age was over and the modern era was at hand. Cromagnon people all but vanished from western Europe, Cromagnon art was no more. Whether these wild chestnut haired hunters followed the ice into what is now Russia or whether they became extinct no one knows. Certain it is their former lands were deserted when the next race of man appeared.

KING OF GREECE LEADS LONELY SECLUDED LIFE

Penned in Castle, Shorn of Power, He Is Ruled and Watched by Government.

Americans who have recently visited the palace describe King George as a lonely disconsolate young man. The utter collapse of the Greek army, the Smyrna catastrophe, the unexpected misery of hundreds of thousands of refugees, the internal convulsions in Greece, the execution of the former cabinet members and the overthrow and subsequent death of his father King Constantine have left a deep impress on the youthful monarch. Added to these troubles is the continued delicate health of his wife Princess Elizabeth of Rumania whose life more than once has been in danger.

The king is closely watched by the revolutionary committee, and all his official acts must have its approval. The latest step of this stern and uncompromising body was to sequester two of the late King Constantine's estates so that they would not fall into the hands of his successor, the present king.

The committee also seized the splendid palace at Corfu built by William Hohenzollern and for many years used by the Greek royal family as a summer home. The palace is now occupied as a hospital by the American Near East Relief organization. The use of the building for the treatment of contagious [illegible] has greatly grieved the king and he has appealed to the Americans to secure other quarters.

So many restrictions are put upon the new sovereign by the revolution [illegible] that he is little more than a figurehead. The Greek people always have been uncertain and fickle in their political and dynastic leanings and they seem to be quite indifferent to the young king as a factor in the affairs of the government. American observers declare King George is quite [illegible] [illegible] his time [illegible] receiving old friends [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] [illegible] the palace [illegible] sent him [illegible] lonely [illegible] he is too well aware of the fact that any such action would probably lose him the [illegible] the [illegible] which [illegible] [illegible] to the Kingship is young [illegible] Paul. Herbert [illegible] Wilson [illegible] bandit master criminal and convicted slayer, who has confessed that he made the bomb which exploded in Wall street in 1920 and which resulted in the death of 30 persons. Wilson is in the Los Angeles Cal county jail and condemned to death. He says he made the bomb and sold it to the man known as Max Wolfe, named as the instigator of the bombing.

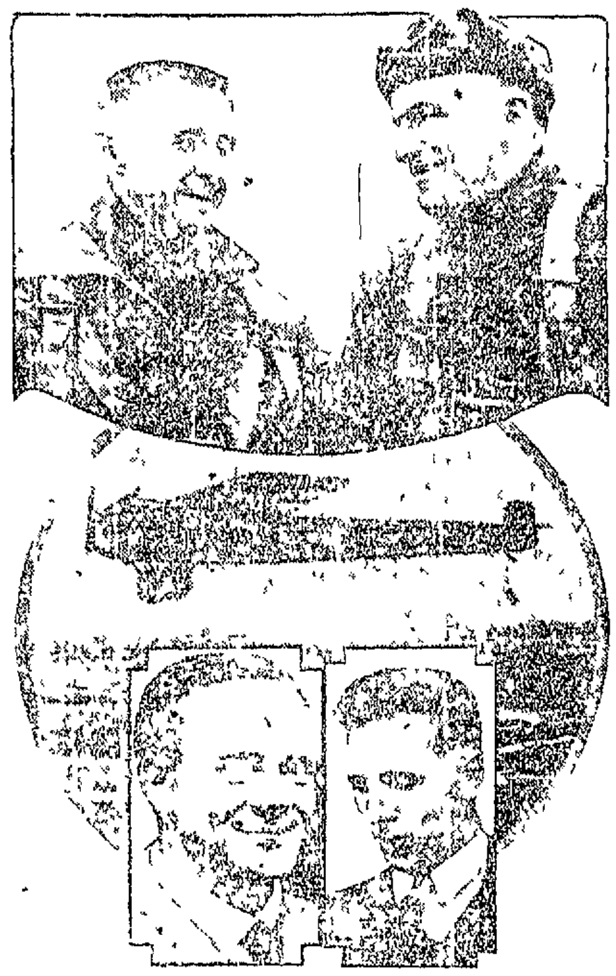
True Sacrificial Spirit

Dad was having one of his economical fits. He believed in a solemn [illegible] to cut down on expenses. Dad pointed out a number of things the government was taxing, and declared that more would be added to the list. He said he had even heard it rumored that the authorities were contemplating slapping a tax on bridge games. The girl was not greatly disturbed. "All right" chirped Patricia, "I'm willing to play bridge all day long for my country."

NEW AERIAL RECORD IS STIMULATING AVIATORS TO THRILLING EXPLOITS



LIEUTENANTS MacREADY AND OAKLEY KELLEY TAKEN AT THE START OF THEIR TRANSCONTINENTAL FLIGHT, PLANE [illegible]

THE [illegible] IN WHICH THE WORLD'S NON STOP RECORD WAS MADE IS TO BE PRESERVED AS HISTORICAL EXHIBIT. JOHN ALCOCK AND ARTHUR BROWN WHO CROSSED THE ATLANTIC IN 1919 (INSETS)

WASHINGTON—Aviation experts see all kinds of brilliant possibilities in the future [illegible] both for peace and war [illegible] MacReady and Kelley [illegible] transcontinental flight of [illegible] hours [illegible] of the Atlantic from Newfoundland to Ireland, the crossing of the Pacific, a transcontinental air [illegible] of from 18 to 20 hours.

The [illegible] plan to save the T-2, in which the record flight was made, from the usual fate of aeroplanes, and preserve it as an historical exhibit. The only other flight to compare to that of Lieutenants MacReady and Kelley was that of John Alcock and Arthur Brown from Nova Scotia to Ireland, a distance of 1930 miles, in 1919.

REDS IN JAPAN STIR UP MASSES TOWARD REVOLT

But They Have No Hope at Present of Succeeding in Effort.

GOVERNMENT EVER ALERT

By United Press

TOKYO, May 9.—Russian Reds are trying to stage a revolution in Japan. They haven't much hope of succeeding—almost no hope at all, for the present, in fact—but they are working.

They are scheming in an effort to get a million or so members of the Japanese outcast caste to rebel against the government.

They hope then, to get several million more of the coolie and unskilled labor class—whose living problem has become almost impossible—to join in the revolution."

Thus they think, social and economic pressure would combine in Japan—the last stronghold in the world of pre-world-war Imperialism—into a mighty rebellion against the established order.

Reports of the existence of this plan have reached the United Press correspondent from confidential, unofficial, but apparently reliable sources.

At the same time this correspondent has abundant information both officially and unofficially, to justify the prediction that the scheme will be sharply suppressed and will for the moment accomplish nothing.

"Red" emissaries both Japanese and Russian have been strictly spreading the revolution doctrine in Japan. It is learned from authoritative sources. They have first tackled the "outcast" class. They are Japanese. They look like all other Japanese—but, by the strange caste system of the Orient they are descended from "outcasts"—they are born with the doom of being themselves "outcasts" all their lives. But the "outcasts" read newspapers. They know every single one of the high-sounding slogans that were shouted to the world during the World War—and since. And yet they know they are still outcasts in Japan. They are ripe for revolt. They have formed mass mobs several times of late, and attacked—and defeated—other mobs of the "upper classes."

GRAVES ALL SOLDIER DEAD CARED FOR BY ENDOWMENT FUND

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 9.—Success of the American Legion Graves Endowment Fund providing flowers in perpetuity for the resting places of American World War dead, means that 1,813 unmarked graves of heroes will annually be decorated. In the eight United States cemeteries in Europe now shrines of patriotism for Americans, rest the bodies of nearly a regiment of "unknown dead." The inclusion of the unmarked crypts among the 32,000 other American graves in Europe, will reconsecrate their graves with the others still remaining in foreign soil.

Practically every post of the Legion in the nation has joined in the campaign to raise this endowment fund, that the memories of those who made the supreme sacrifice shall be recalled. Post members have set out determined not only to raise the quota set for them for this fund, but to exceed this whenever possible. Mass meetings, personal solicitations and broad publicity campaigns have been utilized by legionnaires to secure the necessary funds for the endowment. Increases in receipts have been steadily noted, and many department organizations of the legion are already over the quota set. Mexico has reported 68 per cent more than allocated and France has raised 160,000 francs for the fund. Contributions from nationally known men and women are received almost daily.

President Harding sent in a check for $50 and highly commended the purpose of the endowment. The letter accompanying the chief executive's contribution said:

"The American Legion Graves Endowment fund has my heartiest support. It is a national duty to assist the Legion in raising this endowment. The World War veterans whose bodies still lie overseas died with the hope that their gift to freedom—would sacrifice to save their brothers and children in making like sacrifices. They died in hope that the sacrifice might be a contribution toward putting an end to war.

"We owe them not only this tribute of perpetuating their memory, but our unswerving loyalty to their ideal that the war in which they fought might mark the end of all wars. Please accept the enclosed contribution on the behalf of one who can not too greatly emphasize his obligation to the memory of our dead overseas or his determination that they shall not have died in vain."

Horse Still Supreme With Circus Despite Advent of Motor Cars

Many persons believe that the advent of the automobile has taken away some of the glory of the horse but such is not true in regard to the circus world. The horse is still the king of the arena in the big tent and the wise and astute circus manager realizes this even more than the public.

The John Robinson Circus and trained wild animals, the oldest big circus which again presents itself to Connellsville on May 1[illegible] has an enviable reputation for horses, most of which are thoroughbreds and have been raised largely for exhibition purposes. There are exactly five hundred of them and they range from the Scotch draft horses to the finest and most aristocratic ring stock. The real mission of the horse in the John Robinson circus is for educational purposes in the big preliminary street parade, in the opening spectacle "Peter Pan in Animal Land" and in an unusual number of internationally famous riding acts.

Special attention it is announced is given to the equestrianism in the John Robinson Circus and this feature in turn, is given unusual interest because so many of the riders are young women. There are principal menage, trick and whirlwind rides in all of which the beauty of the horses and the cleverness of the riders has an additional enchantment in the superb costuming. In one number there are two dozen high school riders and in another a true old time English fox hunt is offered. Both of these are fairly crowded with clever young women riders of distinction.

The ability of the John Robinson circus girls as riders as well as the attractiveness of their horses will be announced be evidenced in the morning street parade, as well as in the two performances. America's finest horses, the world's prettiest circus girls ought to prove an attraction to those who admire both.

OHIOPYLE, May 9.—Hampton Potter has purchased a new touring car.

Connellsville Drug Company announces their annual One Cent Sale on May 16, 17, 18 and 19. Watch this paper for advertisement.—Advertisement.—9-2t.

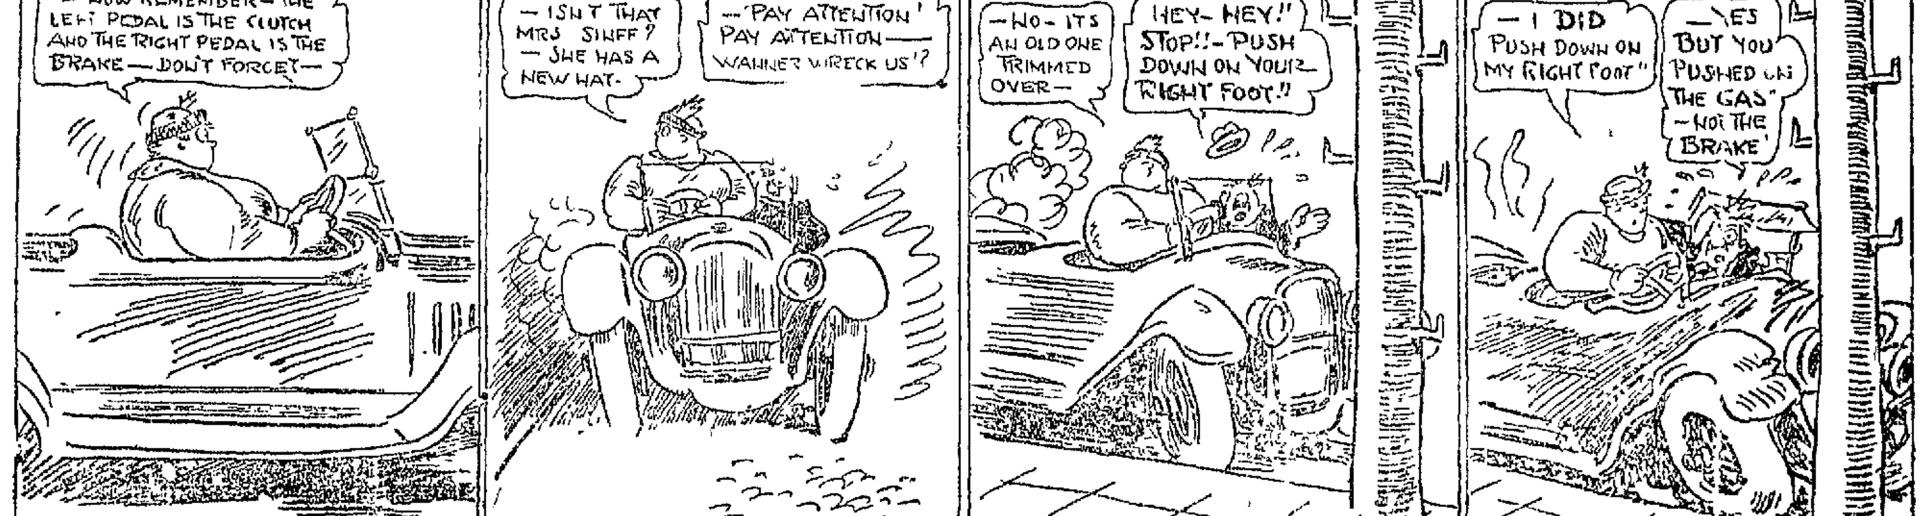
John Mitzy returned home today from a week's visit at his home near [illegible].

Miss Emeline Jackson returned to Connellsville last evening after spending the week-end with her parents here.

A large number of people were entertained by a sermon and music by radio last evening at P. K. Bailey's residence.

Mrs. S. J. Taylor is quite ill.

Bert Orndorff spent over Sunday with relatives here.



A shrill yell, followed by running and mounting guerrillas, roused her hope. They had sighted the cowboys and were in flight. Rapid thumping of boots on the porch told of men hurrying from the house. Several horses dashed past her, not ten feet distant. One rider saw her, for he turned to shout back. This drove Madeline into a panic. Hardly knowing what she did, she began to run away from the house. Her feet seemed leaden. She felt the same horrible powerlessness that sometimes came over her when she dreamed of being pursued. Horses with shouting riders streaked past her in the shrubbery. There was a thunder of hoofs behind her. She turned aside, but the thundering grew nearer. She was being run down.

As Madeline shut her eyes and, staggering, was about to fall, apparently right under pounding hoofs, a rude, powerful hand clapped round her waist, clutched deep and strong, and swung her aloft. She felt a heavy blow when the shoulder of the horse struck her, and then a wrenching of her arm as she was dragged up. A sudden blighting pain made sight and feeling fade from her.

But she did not become unconscious to the extent that she lost the sense of being rapidly borne away. She seemed to hold that for a long time. When her faculties began to return the motion of the horse was no longer violent. For a few moments she could not determine her position. Apparently she was upside down. Then she saw that she was facing the ground, and must be lying across a saddle with her head hanging down. She could not move a hand; she could not tell where her hands were. Then she felt the touch of soft leather. She saw a high-topped Mexican boot, wearing a huge silver spur, and the reeking flank and legs of a horse, and a dusty narrow trail. Soon a kind of red darkness veiled her eyes, her head swam, and she felt motion and pain only dully.

After what seemed a thousand weary hours some one lifted her from the horse and laid her upon the ground, where, gradually, as the blood left her head and she could see, she began to get the right relation of things.

She lay in a sparse grove of firs and the shadows told of late afternoon. She smelled wood smoke, and she heard the sharp crunch of horses' teeth nipping grass. Voices caused her to turn her face. A group of men stood and sat round a campfire eating like wolves. The looks of her captors made Madeline close her eyes, and the fascination, the fear they roused in her made her open them again. Mostly they were thin-bellied, thin-bearded Mexicans, black and haggard and starved. Whatever they might be, they surely were hunger-stricken and squalid. Not one had a coat. A few had scarfs. Some wore belts in which were scattered cartridges. Only a few had guns, and these were of diverse patterns. Madeline could see no packs, no blankets, and only a few cooking utensils, all battered and blackened. Her eyes fastened upon men she believed were white men; but it was from their features and not their color that she judged. Once she had seen a band of nomad robbers in the Sahara, and somehow was reminded of them by this motley outlaw troop.

They divided attention between the satisfying of ravenous appetites and a vigilant watching down the forest aisles. They expected some one, Madeline thought, and, manifestly, if it were a pursuing posse, they did not show anxiety. She could not understand more than a word here and there that they had uttered. Presently, however, the name of Don Carlos revived keen curiosity in her and realization of her situation, and then once more dread possessed her breast.

A low exclamation and a sweep of arm from one of the guerrillas caused the whole band to wheel and concentrate their attention in the opposite direction. They heard something. They saw some one. Grimy hands sought weapons, and then every man stiffened. Madeline saw what hunted men looked like at the moment of discovery, and the sight was terrible. She closed her eyes, sick with what she saw, forgetful of the moment when the guns would leap out.

There were muttered curses, a short period of silence followed by whisperings, and then a clear voice rang out, "El Capitan!"

A strong shock vibrated through Madeline, and her eyelids swept open. Instantly she associated the name El Capitan with Stewart and experienced a sensation of strange regret. It was not pursuit or rescue she thought of then, but death. These men would kill Stewart. But surely he had not come alone. She heard the slow, heavy thump of hoofs. Soon into the wide aisle between the trees moved the form of a man, arms flung high over his head. Then Madeline saw the horse, and she recognized Majesty, and she knew it was really Stewart who rode the roan. When doubt was no longer possible she felt a suffocating sense of gladness and fear and wonder.

Many of the guerrillas leaped up with drawn weapons. Still Stewart approached with his hands high, and he rode right into the campfire circle. Then a guerrilla, evidently the chief, waved down the threatening men and strode up to Stewart. He greeted him. There was amaze and pleasure and respect in the greeting. Madeline could tell that, though she did not know what was said. At the moment Stewart appeared to her as cool and careless as if he were dismounting at her porch steps. But when he got down she saw that his face was white. He shook hands with the guerrilla, and then his glittering eyes roved over the men and around the glade until they rested upon Madeline. Without moving from his tracks he seemed to leap, as if a powerful current had shocked him. Madeline tried to smile to assure him she was alive and well, but the intent blackness of his eyes, the power of his controlled spirit telling her of her peril and his, froze the smile on her lips.

With that he faced the chief and spoke rapidly in the Mexican jargon Madeline had always found so difficult to translate. The chief answered, spreading wide his hands, one of which indicated Madeline as she lay there. Stewart drew the fellow a little aside and said something for his ear alone. The chief's hands swept up in a gesture of surprise and acquiescence. Again Stewart spoke swiftly. His hearer then turned to address the band. Madeline caught the words "Don Carlos" and "pesos." There was a brief muttering protest which the chief thundered down. Madeline guessed her release had been given by this guerrilla and bought from the others of the band.

Stewart strode to her side, leading the roan. Majesty reared and snorted when he saw his mistress prostrate. Stewart knelt, still holding the bridle.

"Are you all right?" he asked.

"I think so," she replied, essaying a laugh that was rather a failure. "My feet are tied."

Dark blood blotted out all the white from his face, and lightning shot from his eyes. She felt his hands, like steel tongs, loosening the bonds round her ankles. Without a word he lifted her upright and then upon Majesty. Madeline reeled a little in the saddle, held hard to the pommel with one hand, and tried to lean on Stewart's shoulder with the other.

"Don't give up," he said.

She saw his gaze furtively into the forest on all sides. And it surprised her to see the guerrillas riding away. Putting the two facts together, Madeline formed an idea that neither Stewart nor the others desired to meet with some one evidently due shortly in the glade. Stewart guided the roan off to the right and walked beside Madeline, steadying her in the saddle. At first Madeline was so weak and dizzy that she could scarcely retain her seat. The dizziness left her presently, and then she made an effort to ride without help. Her weakness, however, and a pain in her wrenched arm made the task laborsome.

Stewart had struck off the trail, if there were one, and was keeping to denser parts of the forest. Majesty's hoofs made no sound on the soft ground, and Stewart strode on without speaking. Neither his hurry nor vigilance relaxed until at least two miles had been covered. The soft ground gave place to bare, rocky soil. The horse snorted and tossed his head. A sound of splashing water broke the silence. The hollow opened into a wider one through which a little brook murmured its way over the stones. Majesty snorted again and stopped and bent his head.

"He wants a drink," said Madeline. "I'm thirsty, too, and very tired."

Stewart lifted her out of the saddle, and as their hands parted, she felt something moist and warm. Blood was running down her arm and into the palm of her hand.

"I'm—bleeding," she said, a little unsteadily. "Oh, I remember. My arm was hurt."

She held it out, the blood making her conscious of her weakness. Stewart's fingers felt so firm and sure. Swiftly he ripped the wet sleeve. Her forearm had been cut or scratched. He washed off the blood.

"Why, Stewart, it's nothing. I was only a little nervous. I guess that's the first time I ever saw my own blood."

He made no reply as he tore her handkerchief into strips and bound her arm. His swift motions and his silence gave her a hint of how he might meet a more serious emergency. She felt safe. And because of that impression when he lifted his head and she saw that he was pale and shaking, she was surprised. He stood before her folding his scarf, which was still wet, and from which he made no effort to remove the red stains.

"Miss Hammond," he said, hoarsely. "It was a man's hands—a Greaser's fingernails—that cut your arm. I know who he was. I could have killed him. But I had to have your freedom. You understand? I didn't dare."

Madeline gazed at Stewart, astounded more by his speech than his excessive emotion.

"My dear boy!" she exclaimed. And then she paused. She could not find words.

He was making an apology to her for not killing a man who had laid a rough hand upon her person. He was asking... He seemed to be in a torture that... would not understand why he had not killed the man. There seemed to be something of passionate scorn in him that he had not been able to avenge her as well as free her.

"Stewart, I understand. You were being my kind of cowboy. I thank you."

But she did not understand so much as she implied. She had heard many stories of this man's cool indifference to peril and death. He had always seemed as hard as granite. Why should the sight of a little blood upon her arm pale his cheek and shake his hand and thicken his voice? What was there in his nature to make him implore her to see the only reason he could not kill an outlaw? The answer to the first question was that he loved her. It was beyond her to answer the second. But the secret of it lay in the same strength from which his love sprang—an intensity of feeling which seemed characteristic of these western men of simple, lonely, elemental lives. All at once over Madeline rushed a ... reflection of how greatly it was possible for such a man as Stewart to love her. The thought came to her in all its singular power. All her eastern lovers who had the graces that made them her equals in the sight of the world were without the only great essential that a lonely, hard life had given to Stewart. Nature here struck a just balance. Something deep and dim in the future, an unknown voice, called to Madeline and disturbed her. And because it was not a voice to her intelligence she deadened the ears of her warm and throbbing life and decided never to listen.

98 OUT OF EVERY 100 WOMEN BENEFITED

An Absolutely Reliable Statement Important to Every Woman

Remarkable Results Shown by a Nation Wide Canvass of Women Purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. 50,000 Women Answer

For some time a circular has been enclosed with each bottle of our medicine bearing this question: "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

Replies, to date, have been received from over 50,000 women answering that question.

98 per cent of which say YES. That means that 98 out of every 100 women who take the medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it.

This is a most remarkable record of efficiency. We doubt if any other medicine in the world equals it.

Think of it — only two women out of 100 received no benefit — 98 successes out of a possible 100.

Did you ever hear anything like it? We must admit that we, ourselves, are astonished.

Of course we know that our medicine does benefit the large majority of women who take it. But that only two out of 100 received no benefit is most astonishing.

It only goes to prove, however, that a medicine specialized for certain definite ailments—not a cure all—one that is made by the most scientific process, not from drugs, but from a wonderful combination of nature's roots and herbs, can and does do more good than heavily pe... prescriptions.

You see, we have been making, improving and refining this medicine for over 50 years until it is so perfect and so well adapted to women's needs that it actually has the virtue to benefit 98 out of every 100 women who take it.

Its reliability and recognized efficiency has gained for it a sale in almost every country in the world—leading all others.

Such evidence should induce every woman suffering from any ailment peculiar to her sex to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and see if she can't be one of the 98. The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Suit skirts are either plain or of the wrap-around type. The plaited skirts, however, are finding favor among the sports suits. White, gray or tan flannel finely plaited is used for many of the smart suits whose jackets are those short colorful affairs.

The little jackets of colored suede are the latest word from Paris and Vienna. These short leather jackets are to be one of the most important items for sports wear this season. They are designed somewhat looser than the suit jacket and are trimmed in contrasting colors and worn with cotton velvet skirts of the color of the jacket. Often they are matched by suede caps very similar to the aviator's cap.
